REFERENCE DEPARTMENT

Harold Mason Judaica Reference Book Award, 1987*

We honor on this occasion Shimeon Brisman, the author of A History and Guide to Judaic Encyclopedias and Lexicons, forming volume two of his Jewish Research Literature series. As many of you know, Mr. Brisman has served the UCLA Library since 1962 as its distinguished Jewish Studies Bibliographer and Lecturer. Owing to his retirement this month and relocation in July to Brooklyn, he is not able to be with us to accept the Harold Mason Judaica Reference Book Award for the best Jewish reference work published in 1987.

In the festschrift for David Noel Freedman (The Word of the Lord shall go Forth: Essays in Honor of David Noel Freedman in Celebration of his Sixtieth Birthday; Winona Lake, 1983), there is a short and accurate text found in the introduction that I would like to share with you: "Scholarship of its nature is an enterprise which must be shared; it is too vast to be done effectively in isolation. Certain individuals may conduct original research in the privacy of libraries or laboratories, but they must communicate their findings to colleagues for testing and refinement."

It is traditional that a scholar be honored with a jubilee volume, or festschrift, on the occasion of a significant anniversary or milestone. Festschriften for academic librarians with records of distinguished service and publications in the field of Jewish studies are few in number, perhaps because so few of us possess doctoral degrees. By means of this award, however, we recognize Shimeon Brisman for his many years of scholarship, dedication, and commitment to sharing his vast knowledge of Jewish research literature with the world at large. Needless to say, volumes three and four are eagerly awaited, and we trust that in retirement, and without the day-to-day administrative pressures of curating a major collection of Judaica and Hebraica, Mr. Brisman’s writing will have fewer interruptions, and we will not have to wait another ten years for volume three to appear.

We have heard a great deal in recent years about the shortage of professional librarians in our rather specialized field. What does this have to do with reference books, you ask? I can think of no better recruiting and training tool than Shimeon Brisman’s set as an inspiration for younger librarians to join our ranks. I am reminded of a verse in the Book of Daniel (12:3): “And the knowledgeable will be radiant like the bright expanse of sky, and those who lead the many to righteousness will be like the stars forever and ever."

I now call upon Dr. Herbert Zafren, our colleague and editor of Hebrew Union College’s “Bibliographica Judaica” series, in which the Brisman set appears, to share Shimeon Brisman’s acceptance statement with us.

It is an old Jewish custom to make a siyum upon the completion of writing a Torah scroll or upon the completion of studying a Talmudic tractate. Usually, a community-wide celebration follows the siyum ceremony. However, there are no celebrations prescribed by tradition for the completion of a volume by an individual author. I am, therefore, very grateful to my colleagues and friends of the Association of Jewish Libraries, and particularly the members of the Harold Mason Reference [Book] Award Committee, for honoring me and my History and Guide to Judaic Encyclopedias and Lexicons at this community-wide gathering of Judaica librarians. Many thanks to all of you.

The relationship between an author and his work is similar to the relationship between a parent and child. First comes the idea. Soon the idea takes on flesh and bone and gradually begins to develop. By the time the idea is ready to be born in print, many an author feels sorry for ever conceiving it. Still, regardless of all the difficulties connected with the birth of a child—the sleepless nights and overburdened days—parents feel proud of their children; the children’s success is their success. An author feels the same.

The road from conception to birth of my History and Guide series was a very long one: almost three decades long. I started out on the road in reaction to a remark by a lecturer at a library science class that “...there is also one Jewish encyclopedia in existence,” and, believe me, there were occasions during which I was ready to give up, even to forswear undertaking such a project.
